PART A: CHOICE ITEMS

ACTIVITY 1

Listen to items 1a-4a and choose the best option (A-F), as in the example. There is one option that you do not need.

Example: So... in these COVID times, it's really important to make sure that we all remember to keep washing our hands really well. This is one of the most important ways of avoiding catching the disease. Start off by using plenty of running water

- 1a. Take care and spend time washing carefully all parts of the hands. Wash very well between the fingers of both hands, so place your fingers between each other and rub well up and down.
- 2a. And turn your hand over, so that you can wash carefully the back of the hands – that's something we often forget to do.
- 3a. And be careful to wash your palms well, the inside of the hand. Use the fingers of one hand to really clean well the inside of the other.
- 4a. And what's really important is to avoid contact with other people, so don't shake hands as this spreads the disease very quickly.

We all see how tattoos are becoming more and more popular today, but not many people know that people have used them since very ancient times, and for very different reasons. I am Joann Fletcher from the University of York. Humans have marked their bodies with tattoos for thousands of years and done so for many different reasons – to protect themselves from danger or magic, to declare love, to show religious belief and even as a form of punishment. Mummies from Ancient Egypt that are about 4000 years old have been found with tattoos, and interestingly, these were all women, who had tattoos over their stomach and abdomen. My work suggests that these tattoos were therapeutic, they were used as a kind of protection for women during the difficult time of pregnancy and childbirth. Many of these women were queens, rich women of high status. But in later times, the ancient Greeks and Romans used tattoos, or 'stigmata' for very different reasons. A master would tattoo his slaves, to show that they belonged to him. Or tattoos might be used as a punishment, and a criminal would be tattooed to show that he had done something wrong. And then in later times... (fade)

- 8a. Sally, it's Mum. Just checking that you remember about tomorrow. You'll come at 9.00, right? I want to get there before they sell out of the fish – it goes really quickly. Last week it was all gone by the time we got there, remember? So don't be late.
- 9a. Sally, it's Mum again. I'm having terrible trouble with that new mobile phone you gave me – I can't work out how to send messages. Can you ask Alex to come by after school to show me how to do it?
- 10a. Sally, it's me again. Did I tell you how to do the chicken for Sunday? You mustn't do it for too long – last time it was really overdone, and also the vegetables. Put an onion inside it, that gives it really good flavour. Will all the children be coming? I'm so looking forward to it.

Do you mean you actually forgot your own child?

Um.. yes, kind of. Well, in my defence, I have 5 children, alright. So it's not as if I have just one. And usually on that day was a day when I would go shopping and I didn't have any children with me, that was what I was used to. So that day in particular, I'd taken the little one, who was about a year old and I had a lot of shopping to do because we had a birthday party. So, I actually had two trolleys full of things. And the baby was in one trolley, right. We get to the checkout and I pay for everything, and then because it was very, very hot, I thought "I'll leave him inside the supermarket and I will go out to the car which was just on the other side of the door and you could see it. I will offload the shopping and will come back and get him and the rest of it. Well, I did that, and I got in the car and I was just driving out of the carpark and I thought "Oh, I've forgotten something". And I stopped the car and I went back in and there indeed was my baby in the trolley with the shopping, the second trolley. There was a woman there and she was looking around clearly for the mother. And she said to me "Is this your baby?" And I said "yes". And she said "You left him here?" And I said "No, no, no". But she was clearly totally unimpressed with me. But yes, I didn't actually completely forget him, but I nearly did.
